Abstract

LowTech GmbH Cloud Transformation Project, building upon the previous analyses and migration strategies. In this phase, the focus is on optimizing cloud operations, performance monitoring, and cost efficiency after the transition to Microsoft Azure. The objective is to ensure system reliability, security, and scalability while fine-tuning the deployed infrastructure. The report outlines key post-migration strategies, including performance assessment, security enhancements, and cost analysis. It introduces automation techniques using tools like Terraform and Ansible for infrastructure management and GitHub Actions for continuous integration and deployment (CI/CD). Special attention is given to monitoring solutions like Azure Monitor and Prometheus to track system performance and detect potential issues in real time. Furthermore, we evaluate cloud cost management techniques by analyzing usage patterns and identifying areas for optimization. The report also discusses future scalability strategies, ensuring that LowTech GmbH is well-equipped to handle growing business demands. This phase serves as the foundation for long-term cloud sustainability, enabling the company to leverage cloud-native solutions efficiently while maintaining operational resilience.

6.1 GitHub Structure

1. Branching Strategy:

The project follows a simple main branch strategy where all contributors work directly on the main branch. This ensures seamless integration without managing multiple branches. All changes should be committed with meaningful messages. Code should be reviewed and tested before pushing to the main branch.

2. Continuous Integration/Continuous Deployment:

- Continuous Integration (CI):

Every code commit triggers an automated build and testing process. This includes:

- Running unit tests to validate individual components.
- Performing integration tests to ensure compatibility between different modules.
- Static code analysis for linting and security vulnerabilities.

- Continuous Deployment (CD):

Once the CI stage passes successfully, the application is automatically deployed to the appropriate environment. This process includes:

- Deploying to a staging environment for final testing.
- Running automated acceptance tests before production deployment.
- Deploying to production with rollback mechanisms in case of failure.

- Documentation Standards
